

1. We can remove attributes that were previously defined in the class body, making the class behave as if those names never existed. Essentially `del` edits the class namespace during class creation.
2. `del` removes the attribute from the subclass's namespace, preventing inheritance lookup from exposing it there. The attribute remains unchanged in the base class.